

AMERICAN FASHION NETWORK

Jackie Ferrari is founder and CEO of American Fashion Network (AFN), an 18 year, certified Woman-Owned business. Ferrari is working to reshape global sourcing by strengthening apparel manufacturing in the USA and the northern triangle of Central America. Together with her multi-generational team, AFN is serving the American war-fighter through development and manufacturing of uniforms and apparel for the Department of Defense and Defense Logistics Agency, and leading American corporations back to our factories for their uniform and apparel needs.

Ferrari is deeply engaged in the bi-partisan movement to balance global manufacturing and reduce our dependency on China. Collectively, in their supply chain, Ferrari and her team fuel more than 650 jobs in the US and Central America.

Since 2005, Ferrari has honed her product development and manufacturing skills in Central New York, California and Wisconsin. She makes her home in Skaneateles and is the mother of three, grandmother of four, and step-mom of one; all while driving a Made in America movement! Ferrari serves on the board of Infinite Hero and on the Executive Leadership team for the American Heart Association.
